

EARLY MODERN CULTURAL STUDIES

Introducing a new book series from the Centre for Reformation and Renaissance Studies

Early Modern Cultural Studies

Early Modern Cultural Studies is a peer-reviewed book series of Brepols Publishers that explores the complexities of the early modern world. Early modernity is broadly conceived as the period from around 1400 to 1700. We welcome monographs and edited volumes that shed new light on and adopt new approaches to the histories and cultural products of this period. The thematic scope allows works in this series to investigate trends and events in cultural, intellectual, social, political, and economic history which are indicative both of change and continuity with the past. The series thus covers issues ranging from (but not limited to) gender, identity, society, emotions, space, material culture, religion, and politics and their intersections. We accommodate books such as illustrations and are particularly interested in studies in art and architectural history.

Editorial Board

Stephen J. Campbell, Johns Hopkins University
Brian Cummings, University of York
Nicola Zaccaro Davis, University of Toronto
Kathy Eden, Columbia University
Serge Gruzinski, EHESS, Paris
Gerrit Janckmann, Ghent University
Lynda Magnusson, University of Toronto
Neil Rennie, Oxford University

Andrew Pettigrew, University of St. Andrews
Ulrich Plattner, LMU-Munich
Judit Pálfi, London University
Maureen Prak, Utrecht University
Jenssen Roodenrys, Free University Amsterdam
Patricia R. Smith, Columbia University
Christopher S. Wood, New York University

For submission guidelines, please see our website: www.brepols.com.
For further inquiries, please contact Dr. Joanna Lubbers, Chief Editor joanna.lubbers@brepols.com

Early Modern Cultural Studies
Centre for Reformation and Renaissance Studies (CRRS)
E. J. Pratt Library, Room 304
71 Queen's Park Crescent East
Toronto ON M2S 1E7
Canada
tel: +1 416 593 4863

Centre for Reformation &
Renaissance
Studies

BREPOLS PUBLISHERS

www.brepols.com